

ALL EYES TURN TO PRIMARY IN NEW YORK TODAY

Both Parties Will Choose Senatorial and State Candidates; Interest in the Progressive Vote Is Very Keen.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(U.S. Press.)—A candidate for United States senator and a complete state ticket will be nominated at the statewide primary tomorrow. Chief interest in the election apparently centered tonight in whether the party will be able to swing the vote of a majority of the rank-and-file Governor Charles S. Whitman, leading Republican candidate for governor. One wing of the party favors the election of Judge Samuel Seabury, whose candidacy for governor on the Republican ticket is recognized.

National as well as state leaders of both parties are deeply interested in the outcome of the progressive party contest, for they believe it may have an important bearing upon the outcome of the presidential campaign in New York. It is conceded by both sides that the majority of those who vote for Governor Whitman in the primaries will support Charles Hughes for president, while most of those who support Judge Seabury will vote for President Wilson.

Teddy for Bacon.

Next to the fight for progressive be settled tomorrow is that between Robert Bacon, former ambassador to France, and William H. Calder, a former congressman, for the republican nomination for the United States senate. Mr. Bacon did not enter the lists until a few weeks ago, and has An incident of the day was the publication of a letter from Theodore Roosevelt urging Mr. Bacon's nomination on the preparedness issue. Many of the county and district leaders of the party are in favor of this nomination.

The democrats also have a contest on their hands for the senatorial nomination, but managers of the campaign for William F. McCombs, former chairman of the democratic as-

The only opposition to Governor Whitman's nomination within his own party came from Bristol, Scotland, Wis.

A feature of the primaries will be the more general use of school houses as polling places, especially in the various boroughs of New York city.

COMES TO END OF LIFE'S JOURNEY

Former Albuquerquean, Loved
by All Who Knew Him, Succ

"Nick" Harper is dead. The spark of life, which for years flickered dimly

The warm heart that drew to it all with whom he came in contact foundered to death.

The end came Sunday night at 5 o'clock at the home of his parents in Louisville, Kentucky, where he went last May for a vacation trip. Ten-

To give a sliver of "Nick" Rapier seems almost useless. No better known or better loved man ever lived in Albemarle.

one or two brief absences, he had made his home here, and during the time he had become actively identified with the business and social life of the city in all its various phases. Whether it was a baseball game or a business men's meeting, Nick Rap-

Lived on His Nerve.
The death of Mr. Barber will surprise no one who knew him. For years he had lived literally on his nerve.

tion. No one knew better than he the seriousness of his condition, but he would not allow himself to take a gloomy view of his case, and frequently he has been known, while lying on a bed of sickness, to speak jestingly of the undertakers sending

Mr. Rapier came to Albuquerque in search of health about the year 1905. At the time he was in reduced circumstances, and it is characteristic of ground for a "question," had went to work at once at a job." He was street car conductor for a while, and his old-time friends have to tell a story of how, on a carnival occasion, he stopped his car on Central avenue for fifteen minutes that he and his passengers were waiting for a friend.

Members of all chambers of commerce and business organizations in the state have been notified. The president intends to discuss the provision of the eight-hour railroad law.

of how on a carnival occasion, he stopped his car on Central Avenue to listen mindlessly that he and his passengers could witness a startling sight.

shots today in a skirmish with Mexican cattle smugglers, who fled, as far as can be learned no one was hurt in the affair.

Subscribed and sworn to before
ME, My commission expires Feb. 13

me this 15th day of September, 1916,
ROBERT T. SEWELL,
Notary Public.
1917.

shots today in a skirmish with Mexican cattle smugglers, who fled, as far as can be learned no one was hurt in the affair.

Subscribed and sworn to before
ME, My commission expires Feb. 13

me this 15th day of September, 1916,
 ROBERT T. SEWELL,
 Notary Public.
 1917.

2010 年 12 月 10 日

.....